

quaintance of an animal in the Zoo whose name begins with E.

Will it be very small or very great? Watch and you will see!

MERELY COMMENT

Jimmie Simpson, society leader and vice president and best-dressed man in Marshal Field's celebrated dry goods emporium, admits that some married men in his employ get as much as $12 a week, on which to raise and educate a family.

And the Marahal Field store is one of the things of which Chicago has boasted.

Well, girls, when a bank clerk comes lovin' around better shoo him away unless he gets over $1,000 a year. For if he doesn't get that much the bank won't let him get married.

A bricklayer is better off than a bank clerk and earns and gets better pay. It is because he belongs to a union.

Julius Rosenwald appears to be peeved. But you can't blame him. He got a lot of swell advertising as a great-hearted philanthropist before the O'Hara commission showed up what wages he paid.

From the testimony it would appear that the Illinois Trust and Savings is about the best bank in town so far as treatment of employes is concerned.

Some newspapers seem to enjoy kidding Bryan because he drinks grape juice instead of filling up on red hicker. But William J. will get farther on grape juice than he would on booze.

Bob Redfield isn't saying much in the papers about that Pennsylvania depot, but the chances are he's the busy little man fixing things up so the Pennsylvania will get what it wants. Redfield is the legal Mister Fixit for the Penna.

The one thing our "leading" citizens appear to know best about low wages is that they like to pay 'em.

When the office boy writes editorials on the minimum wage for the Daily News he kicks both ways at once and hence doesn't get anywhere, except to favor further investigation; and the furtherer the better.

There is some warmth in Julius Rosenwald at that. He sweated real sweat on the witness stand, although the heat may have been under his collar.

It isn't often that Chicago's marvelous magnate of the money trust, George Millions Reynolds, goes on exhibition before the crowd. So let us enjoy the sight while we may.

TO-DAY'S ODD NEWS

Aurora, Ill.—"Slide, Tillis, slide," was cry of bleacherites when two teams of girls, one wearing white and the other blue stockings, staged a baseball game.

Joliet, Ill.—After Magistrate Connors had fined her $25 for disorderly conduct, Mary Fatjnk attacked him with garden hose.

New York.—Meyer Bellport, 16, walked into police station and offered three coppers for a bed. Said they were last of 5,000 pennies he had stolen.

New York.—While arguing over taxi bill of $8 Phillip Bannia fell out of car with $1,200 in currency clutched in hand. Arrested for intoxication.

East Palestine, O.—Poodle dog owned by Mrs. Henrietta Daltenfeld was shot by Mrs. Venetia Hardy after it chewed up several lace curtains and century-old Bible. Mrs. Hardy was arrested.

Cleveland.—One death and two prostrations yesterday. Hottest June 6 in forty years.

Brownsville, Pa.—Wm. T. Daugherty, who has attended game in Pittsburgh once every week for 20 years, saw the Pirates win for first time on Thursday.